Happy Birthday Hitch

Spotlight on Alfred Hitchcock

Hosted by Graeme Blundell

Six great movies from the master of suspense
August 6 – 11 on FOX Classics

Every August FOX Classics shines the light on the man who earned himself the title of the original master of suspense.

Alfred Hitchcock was born on August 13, 1899, and died on April 29, 1980. He directed his first films in the 1920s and from the start set his focus on matters of suspense, psychology and surprise twists. He moved from England to America in 1939 to continue his career as a prolific film and television director and producer. Hitchcock was never to win the Academy Award for Best Director, although he was nominated five times and his first Hollywood feature Rebecca was awarded Best Picture in 1940. He received an Honorary Lifetime Achievement Academy Award in 1967. He was awarded the American Film Institute Lifetime Achievement Award in 1979 and made a Knight of the British Empire just months before his death.

With Spotlight on Alfred Hitchcock, FOX Classics showcases some of Hitchcock's many movies which still have audiences on the edge of their seats.

Graeme Blundell will introduce the films each night. He said "These are classic movies loaded with indelible images and darkly humorous dialogue, all designed to delight, entertain, and shock moviegoers. And they still do.

"The corpulent, droll master of suspense certainly knew how to entertain. In a characteristically incisive remark, Mr Hitchcock once summed up his approach to moviemaking: 'Some films are slices of life, mine are slices of cake'."

Hitchcock became known for making cameo appearances in most of his films and he appears (fleeting) in all of the week's features.

Sunday August 6

8.35pm EST - Vertigo (1958)
